The capability of citizens and social networks to generate and shape organizations and the functions of lobbying and charities is has to emerge and contribute to the growth of the Hypercity, I envisaged. The freedom to be networked under some form of organizations, for example, cooperatives, unions, and other sorts of collective functions, charity organizations and sport clubs are virtually considered by the governments with utmost Suspicion. Nonetheless, the societies have to reassess the cultural traditions that hamper the region from growth, e.g., history and grave tribalism (the caves), foster the memetic recombination, and utilize characteristics that help the social capital is formed and, Hypercitizenship as well as new designing is possible.

The HoA is so strategic location, with approximately 5,573 km coastline and diverse natural and environmental resources [(pinimg.com)] with huge trade and marine shipment potential. However, it has remained, for most part, practically in isolation from the world interaction, e.g., Eritrea. The economy has to be revived and all the sectors require hyper-activation. Sustainability is not necessarily to be slow down the activities below unacceptable levels. When I say reconfiguration to revive the economy, I don't mean a borderless societies created. Indeed, the countries need to demarking international borders before they embark to reopen for future interaction to the best interest of their citizens. They should understand the principle that trade benefits all partners, or else perish to death or remain in the old days, as the image in indexicality #14 B shows.

The term “Habesha” is both Symbolic and rhetoric for it in broader sense function as a supra-national ethnic identifier inclusive of Ethiopian and Eritrean. However, let's also aspire to have a global mindset that goes beyond Habesha into the cosmopolitan one world family because Habesha itself “is also used in varying degree of inclusions and exclusion of others” habasha - Search \(bing.com\) [39]. Moreover, injera, Geez script, unique time, and calendar, etc., metaphorize the HoA community,
